Setting the Date and Budget for Your Baby Shower

CHAPTER 1

Setting the Date and Budget for Your Baby Shower

Establishing the right date and budget is the foundation of a successful baby shower. Begin by coordinating with the expecting parents to select a date that aligns with their schedule and ensures key guests can attend, typically 4-6 weeks before the due date. Consider weekends or evenings when most guests are available. Once the date is set, define a realistic budget based on expected guest count, venue, catering, decorations, and gifts.

Creating a detailed budget helps prioritize spending, avoid overspending, and plan for unexpected expenses. Use the PDF checklist to allocate funds for each category, from invitations to party favors. For example, if hosting at home, costs may be minimal, but a venue might require a significant portion of your budget. Communicate with the expecting parents to understand their preferences and expectations, ensuring your plans align with their vision.

Practical tip: Always include a contingency fund of around 10-15% of your total budget for unforeseen costs. Early planning and clear communication about financial limits will keep your baby shower organized and enjoyable.

- Set a date at least 6-8 weeks in advance.

Consider the size of the venue and your budget to determine an appropriate guest count. Use the PDF's organized template to list guests, track RSVPs, and manage contact information efficiently.
